

What do they all have in common?

Stuart has written and published a book, which is now also a play.

Jill is a student and does voluntary work for a local charity in her spare time.

Barry writes poetry and has presented at international conferences.

They all have major communication disabilities and need to use special communication aid technology to 'speak'.

Using Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC) they all actively participate and contribute to society as independent individuals.

Contact details:

 ALL Scotland

NOW HEAR ME
it's my right to speak

NHS Education for Scotland